Germany wants to enter the tournament with confidence in every part of the game. Training sessions now include detailed planning for defensive and attacking set pieces. Players must learn clear roles and movement patterns. These small details often become very important in close matches.

The staff also carefully studies other teams. They review tactics, strengths, and weaknesses of possible opponents. This preparation helps Germany stay ready for many situations. Nagelsmann believes teamwork between coaches will improve communication with players. A strong support group allows the head coach to focus on overall strategy.

FIFA World Cup: Strong Coaching Partnership Builds Confidence inside the German Squad

The relationship between Julian Nagelsmann and Alfred Schreuder goes back several years. The two coaches worked together at TSG Hoffenheim during an important period of their careers. At that time, Nagelsmann was one of the youngest head coaches in European football. Schreuder supported him with tactical advice and training ideas.

Schreuder recently spoke about that experience in an official statement from the German Football Association. He said Nagelsmann impressed him with courage and strong knowledge of the game. Even after they stopped working together at Hoffenheim, they stayed in contact. This continued friendship made it easy to start working together again.

Schreuder said it is a great honor to support the German national team for the FIFA World Cup during such an important period. Working at a global tournament is a special moment for any coach. He wants to bring his knowledge and help the players perform at their best.

Soccer World Cup: International Coaching Experience Adds New Ideas to the German Team

Alfred Schreuder brings many years of international coaching experience to the German staff. He has worked in several leagues across Europe and the Middle East. Each league has its own playing style and tactical challenges. These experiences help a coach see the game from different angles.

Schreuder is currently working with Al-Diraiyah in Saudi Arabia. Before that, he managed major clubs, including AFC Ajax and Club Brugge. Both teams compete at high levels and demand strong tactical planning. Managing such clubs helped Schreuder grow as a leader and strategist.

He also worked as an assistant coach at FC Barcelona between 2020 and 2021. During that time, he assisted head coach Ronald Koeman. Working at one of the world's most famous clubs gave Schreuder valuable insight into top-level football.

These experiences allow him to bring fresh ideas to the German national team. Coaches who work in different countries often learn new training methods and tactical systems. Sharing those ideas can help players improve their understanding of the game.
